1. During April 1947, numerous German boys between the ages of eight and fourteen disappeared in the Naumburg (J89) area. It is claimed that similar disappearances of youths have been reported throughout Saxony.

2. One boy of fourteen years, who escaped to the British Zone after eight days confinement on an eastbound rail transport, had been picked up on a highway by a Russian car.

3. A German woman lawyer, employed to trace a boy of ten, discovered that 300 boys had been reported as missing to the police in Saxony during one month. Police investigations are frustrated by the Russians.
